

Steve Hartman

Steve Hartman used to sell fire trucks for a living. Now he is a stand up comedian. His high school guidance counselor didn't even tell him those were options. She said he'd have a successful career as an underachiever. She couldn't have been more wrong.

Universal yet unique, Steve has been traveling the country leaving great shows in his wake. His special brand of sardonic optimism oozes positive energy while he skewers life's absurdities. To Steve the glass is always half full and ready to spill. When it does, the result is a memorable performance and a hilarious journey into a world where we are all the punch line.

More and more people are catching the buzz as Steve performs to the rave reviews of diverse audiences at comedy clubs, colleges and corporate events. Steve was excited to be featured in a story on Fox News and CNN about the importance of stand up comedy during tough economic times. He can also be seen on rooftopcomedy.com.

